

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

My husband and I are both retired and did not appreciate receiving the numerous telemarketing calls we were getting before signing up for the no call service provided by the Indiana Telephone Privacy law. Now we only receive an occasional call.

I feel being older makes me a target for the telemarketers who are, in my opinion, con artists who prey on the older citizens. If I want or need a service or product I am capable of finding the name and telephone number in my telephone books.
